Ww. C. BRYANT, the Poet, says:
"The merits of Dr. Kane's recent work are so universally schnowledged, that it seems superfluous to praise it."

The Rev. Francis L. Hawks, Lt. D., ways:

"The would have in it few such stories of human suffering and herole endourance as is presented in Dr. Kane's last work. The book is one which needs not the word of approbation from any pan, it carries with it its own recommendation; and I should best that in me it would be but an act of impertinence should I pretend to indoze its merits. Dr. Kane and his book will, very properly, be remembered long after I am forgotten."

G. P. R. James, the Novelies, says:
"I read the two volumes with deeper interest than I ever felt in any work in my life, and I concluded them with love and admiration for the man who wrote them. I only wish there were a dense volumes more."

The Hon. George Banckovr, the Historian, esys:
"His expedition, in view of the small number of his party, the size of his vessel (which had not even one companion), the extent to which he explored the Polar regions, the learth of time he remained there, and the marvels of his escape—seems to me without a parallel."

Major Gen. WINFIELD SCOTT says:

"I have read Dr. Kare's Arcile Explorations (only since his death) with the mest polynom interest. So many noble adventurs in the cause of homosity—so many breathers excepts from minimum destruction—so much schieved for actions—and all to din spirited yet classical English—which the young hero and scholar, though in haste, had tardly committed to the immortal press when he sank into the grave, the victim of his own undying abors!"

MEMOIR OF MRS. MARY WINSLOW.

By her Son, OCTAVILS WINSLOW, D. D.

"We have been much delighted to reading this most interesting Memoir of a most interesting lady. Beginning life as the gav and thoughtless bride of a British efficer, she became an unusually devent and neaful Christian, and by her personal intercourse and her correspondence excited a blessed tofluence upon many hearts. She died in 1854, in her eightfelth year. This Memoir will be respecially interesting to mothers, for Mrs. Winslow was a model mother. But there is in it much to quicken the faith and love of all the people of God. We hope it may have a wide circulation." If we will have a wide circulation. New-York Bis Tribune.

....No. 5,766.

It is the race faculty of this author to invest everything and conches with surprising interest. Rural life, as side described it, becomes more attractive in its simplicity than that of the most fulfillant count. Every person introduced into his story—from the venerable Dr. Hopatins, sereme in his lafty repose as a mountain in surity, to the indescribable Candace, joiliest and most characteristic of African servants—becomes as once an intimate friend, in whose cancer the reader has a direct personal lustrest.

The attempt was a darlig one; for Mrs Browe proposed to have her story on the religious character of the times. It would have been an extraordinary book, even if she had not succeeded in making it so attractive. But it is certain no author ever work the sumber threads of theology list os obrilliant apatisers. The workings of different murds, under the influence of that alouny but subtime faith, form a study which holds every reader fire-strably. The world is now turning its attention snew to the great problems of religious, and the book is destined, in popular phrase, to "set every booy thinking."

In making this prediction respecting the success of THE MIN-ISTER'S WOOING, the publishers only repeat the substance of thousands of critical notices from the lacking literary and political journals of this country and Great Britain. No novel publishe in this country has ever received such unsulmous and enthulastic praise.

THE NEW LIFE OF HUMBOLDT.—

[Humboldt the Scholar]

Humboldt spent over twenty years of his infe in Paris, working up the results of his famous jourcey to the New World. He produced a militude of books during this time, many of which are of the highest invortance to science. A comprehensive account of these, with sarrasts from the most important, may be found in the chapter entitled. Books, bowhere else can even a list of these works be obtained. This chapter will delight the lover of library g saip. It is a charming leaf from the life-book of the great scholar.

A NNALS OF THE AMERICAN BAPTIST A PULPIT (being the sixth volume of the "Anuals of the American Polipit"), by Was, E. Spracter, D. D. 200. 53.

"The great work of Dr. Sprame, which will be a memorial of his indefatigable industry in collecting materials, and his skill as occurred to the sixth volume. This is devoted to the Bap in denomination. The first two volumes complied the Trinitarian Congressionalists: the third and fourth, the Preshybrians; the fifth, the Episcopaliane. The work will proceed with the remaining demendantions and when completed, will furnish an American demendantions and when completed, will furnish an American technical biography from the earliest settlement, and through the wide extent of the United Scates. From a continued and extensive correspondince with persuas of the nighest standing and intelligence, and from other sources of information of the best authority, he has been enabled to two not only well filled details of the lives and labors of the subjects, but interesting skytches of trails of character, for. The volumes before published have received, not only from religious papers and periodicals, but also from the security to the tourney, impariality, and discrimination with which his biographics have been composed."—(Christian Intelligence.

Lemdon Fress

"The author of this movel pressess the signal merit of being a progressive writer. "John Halifax" was a decided improvement open in preferencesors; and tere, in "A Life for a Life," we have again a marked anyance upon "John Halifax." The book is signally the best it author hay seprenced. The interest is in many parts intense, and is everywhere admirably sortained, Incident abounds, and both dislogue and style are satural and flowing. Great deheavy in the development of character and a subble power of self-analysis are complication in "A Life for a Life" while the purity of its religious views and the elevation, the grandeur, indeed, of its deminating sentiments, rendwrits indicences, in every sense, healthy and in significant, rendwrits indicences, in every sense, healthy and insignating.

"We like it better than "Join Halifax." This is a book we should like every member of every family in Empland to read."

"A very facinating novel. But the writer evidently has a deeper purpose than to atmose. She has written with a nobler aim, and recognized a 'higher law' than at present governs society."

The Press, Philadelphia.

"When we say that it is fully equal to, and in some respects society. The Press, Philadelphia.

"When we say that it is fully equal to, and in some respects even better than, "John Halifax, Gentleman," we second it no ordinary prulse. Her maracter, so charmingly developed, is most natural, and a poetical halo invests it. It reminds us, in some points, of "Jane Eyre," but is more delicate, more womanly, than that powerful creation. This is not merely a love-story; it also emphatically is a life-story. There is power as well as pateon in the record.

Boston Transcript.

"Entertaining, and we can truly say, instructive. It has the pure, social somiment, the elaborate characterization, and the undercurrent of genuine sense and sentiment, which distinguish Miss Muloch."

"In 'A Life for a Life, we recognize all the characteristics of the p palar author of 'John Halifax.' We find the same appliations, the same purity of tone, the same declay of portrainure, the same truth in the portrayal of home life.'

"The popularity of 'John Halifax,' unlike that of most works of fiction, has singularly increased from its first production, and given a character for power and intelligence to the sauthor, which is for the most part unprecedented at the present time. 'A Life for a Life,' though in put and construction it is entirely different from 'John Halifax,' is in every purificular equal to that work, and by many degrees, in some of its scene, in advance of it.

"The reader baving read the book through for the story, will be apt (if he be of our persusaion) to return and read again, many pages and passages with a reader pleasare than on a first permai. The whole book is replete with a graceful, tender delicacy; and in addition to its other merits, it is written in good, careful English."

FIFTH. LOVE, MICHELET'S WONDERFUL BOOK.

The unexpected sale of this remarkable volume is the subject of mazement everywhere. Newspapers are out with long reviews of it. Copi us extracts are filling the columns of most of our journals. Critics are by the ears upon the morality and tendency of its tene. The religious press praise it, and the religious press of its tone. The religious press praise it, and the religious press condemn it. Altogether, the volume is in its TWENTIETH EDITION, and has become the "sensation book" of the day.

These books will be sent by mail, postage free, to any part of the United States, on the results of the price, by AUDD & CARLITON, Poblishers and Booksellers, No. 130 Grand et., near Broadway, New-York. THREE NEW BOOKS.

The popular young traveler, whose name is a "household word" throughout the land, has never written acytaing more charming than that introduction; the best critics consider it the first thing that he has done. Sympathicing in all his tastes with the great Humboldt, he writes of him with affectiouste reverence. His account of his interview with him is the most life-like piece of begraphical writing since Boawell's Jones. The dead awant lives again in his picturesque pages; "the foremost man in all the world." THE NEW LIFE OF HUMBOLDT.
